Research

- 2002- Post-doctoral research: "Cultural Citizenship and the Non-citizen Immigrant Voting Rights Movement." Ethnographic study of this grassroots movement to increase immigrant participation in municipal politics and policies. Sponsored by the Social Science Research Council's International Migration Program (2001-2002). Piloted research as a Public Policy Fellow at Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study (2000-2001).
- 2004- "Cambridge Ties the Knot" social documentation project of the first night that legal marriage licenses were granted to same-sex couples in Massachusetts. This teaching video for classroom and community audiences will include interviews with participants, observers, and policy makers to prompt discussion of the role of marriage in citizenship in the U.S. Collaborators: Prof. Ann Holder, Pratt Institute, Krina Patel, Harvard Graduate School of Education.
- 1996-2000 Doctoral project entitled "Motherhood and Cultural Citizenship: Organizing Immigrant Latinas in San Francisco, California." Committee members: Professors Renato Rosaldo (Chair), George Collier, Sylvia Yanagisako. Ethnographic study of a grassroots immigrant women's organization in San Francisco's Mission district. Research focused on motherhood and community activism as transformational citizenship experiences. Addressed citizenship through consideration of intersecting issues of subjectivity, collective identification as immigrants and Latinas, and experiences of domestic violence and symbolic/political violence (e.g. xenophobic movements, anti-immigrant legislation).
- Dec. 1993-
Oct. 1994 Visiting Researcher, Programa Interdisciplinario de Estudios de la Mujer (PIEM), El Colegio de México, Mexico City. Ethnographic research on the health care practices of medically uninsured, poor women in urban and rural communities of central Mexico. Working with community based lay health promoters, interviewed three dozen women about their experiences of health, alternative and state sponsored health care. Sponsored by the Organization of American States Fellowship program.
- 1991-1994 Research Consultant and Spanish Language Interviewer, U.C. Berkeley. Ethnographic interviewer and consultant on Spanish speaking immigrant workers for the "Why Work?" project in Oakland, California for Principal Investigator Carol Stack, Professor, UC Berkeley School of Education.
- 1990-1991 Department of Medical Anthropology, U.C.S.F. Staff for "The Oldest Old" longitudinal study of aging and independent living among San Francisco Bay Area elders over 85 years of age, P.I. Professor Colleen L. Johnson.
- 1988-1989 Student research project entitled "Irish Americans of San Francisco: White Ethnicity, Family and Community in a Contemporary Context." Politics, kinship, race, and cultural geography among middle-class white ethnics.
- 1988 Research assistant, Stanford Campus Archaeology Department. Assisted in the excavation of cultural sites on Stanford lands and the curation for repatriation of Stanford's Ohlone artifacts and remains.
