

Sean A. Pager is associate professor at Michigan State University College of Law, where he serves as Associate Director of the Intellectual Property, Information and Communications Law Program (IPIC). He teaches various intellectual property law courses. A 1998 graduate of U.C. Berkeley School of Law, Professor Pager practiced law at Howard Rice in San Francisco and clerked for Judge James Browning on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Prior to entering academia, Professor Pager earned an LL.M. in International Law from the European University Institute in Florence, Italy, while studying on a Fulbright Fellowship. His scholarly interests focus on the regulation of creative industries and cultural identities in intellectual property and international trade law.
