

Photophysics of Single C-phycocyanin Monomers

C-phycocyanin forms the primary antenna rods in phycobilisomes. 7+ distinct photophysical states of the 3-chromophore C-PC monomer are resolved in the ABEL trap in multiple variables. The observed states support a FRET-based model of energy transfer, with reversible transitions among neighboring states.

