

CONTENTS

List of illustrations		page viii
List of tables		xii
Preface	and	acknowledgements xiii
Introduction: The setting and argument
A narrative setting		1
A social archaeology		2
Narrative textures and archaeologies of the ineffable		3
Emergent narratives and an argument		5
The structure of the book		7
A note on illustrations and references to ceramics		7
A note on Greek texts		8
1 The design of archaic Korinth: the question of a beginning and an interpretive archaeology
Interests and discourse		9
The question of a beginning and a problem of method		10
An aryballos from Korinth: the beginning of an approach		11
Design in the material world: understanding an artifact		12
Interpretive archaeology and relational philosophy		24
A relational method of an interpretive archaeology		32
The assemblage of an aryballos		34
A productive map		34
Mapping narratives: interpretive beginnings	3	6
2 Craft production in the early city state: some historical and material contexts
Fine accomplishment, and risk (with an aside on the skeuomorph)		37
A sample of 2,000 Korinthian pots		40
The aryballos in a workshop		42
Pots and figured subjects		50
Eighth- and seventh-century Korinth: political histories		52
Tyranny, power and discourses of sovereignty		59
Korinth, the material environment: a continuity of change		61

Social histories: making anthropological sense of archaic aristocracy	70
Patronage, design and ideology?	72
3 Early archaic Korinth: design and style
Part 1: an interpretive dialogue through a Korinthian aryballos	73
Faces, heads, and the look of the panther
Monsters: identity, integrity, violence, dismemberment
Violence, experiences of the soldier, the animal and the body
Violence and sex, animals and the absence of woman
Masculinity and the domestic
Violence and the state
The lord, his enemies, and sovereign identity
Speed, the games, and a band of men
Life-style and an aesthetics of the body
Aryballos Boston 95.12: a summary interpretation
Part 2: Korinthian ceramic style: eighth through seventh centuries BC	151
Animal art and the decorative: is there a case to answer?
A short note on anthropologies of art
Pattern and order, texture and accent
Innovation, variability and change
An overview of Korinthian ceramic design
4 Consumption: perfume and violence in a Sicilian cemetery
Perfume and the body	172
Cemeteries and sanctuaries: the shape of consumption	175
Cemeteries and sanctuaries in early archaic Greece	175
Design and provenance	176
The consumption of Korinthian pottery at some particular sites	181
The gift and identity through self-alienation	189
Writing the body	191
A stylistic repertoire and the translation of interests	192
5 Trade and the consumption of travel
Homo economicus and homo politicus : minimalist models of archaic trade	195
Travel and mobility	200
Experience and the constitution of geographical space	201
The conceptual space of archaic Korinthian design	202
The Phoenicians, east and west	203
The orientalisising cauldron	206
Colonisation and its discourse	207
The consumption of travel	208

6 Art, design and the constitutive imagination in the early city state	210
Bibliography	214
Index	234