“RSP is a must-do for anyone seriously interested in Japanese history and culture. With the lectures and discussions on topics ranging from religious history to the educational system to postwar economic recovery, I could not have asked for a broader or deeper understanding of Japan.”

Steven Pelcovits, 2008 RSP
University of Chicago, Class of 2012

Apply to the RSP
The RSP accepts applications annually in September and October, and the course takes place from February through June. A PDF of the application can be downloaded at www.reischauerscholars.org.

Contact Information
Naomi Funahashi,
Reischauer Scholars Program Coordinator
nfunahashi@stanford.edu
http://spice.stanford.edu

RSP Advisory Board
Consul General
Hiroshi Inomata,
Consulate General of Japan
in San Francisco

Professor Emeritus
Daniel Okimoto,
Stanford University

Ambassador
Michael Armacost,
Shorenstein Distinguished Fellow, Shorenstein Asia Pacific Research Center, Stanford University

Professor
Nisuke Ando,
Doshisha University, Kyoto

Assistant Professor
Phillip Lipsky,
Stanford University

Director
Gary Mukai,
Stanford Program on International and Cross-Cultural Education
About the RSP

The RSP (Rushpixel Scholar Program) is an online course for high school students that is sponsored by the Stanford University. The program is designed for high school students with an interest in Japanese studies and culture. The program is open to students from the United States and other countries who wish to learn more about Japan and Japanese culture. The RSP provides students with an opportunity to take courses and earn college credit from Stanford University. The program is divided into three parts: pre-college, college, and post-college.

The pre-college part of the program includes online courses that focus on Japanese culture, history, and language. Students will have the opportunity to take courses such as Japanese literature, Japanese history, and Japanese language. The college part of the program includes a study abroad program in Japan. Students will have the opportunity to take courses at a Japanese university and live and study in Japan. The post-college part of the program includes a job placement program. Students will have the opportunity to find internships and jobs in Japan.

The RSP is open to students from all over the world. The program is free of charge and does not require students to pay any fees. The program is fully funded by Stanford University.

The RSP is designed to help students develop their knowledge of Japanese culture and language. The program will also help students develop their critical thinking and problem-solving skills. The RSP is open to students of all ages and backgrounds. The program is designed to be flexible and accommodating to the needs of each student.