Science and Sensibility
in the American Enlightenment

October 12 - 2007
Lane History Building
Room 307
Stanford University

10:30 am
“Who’s Afraid of the American Enlightenment?: Science and Culture in Early American History”
James Delbourgo
McGill University

11:15 am
“Black Lights: Phillis Wheatley, Benjamin Banneker, as Critics of Enlightenment”
Joyce Chaplin
Harvard University

2:00 pm
“Carribean Science and Sensibility”
Susan Scott Parrish
University of Michigan

2:45 pm
“Ancient Carthage and the Limits of Classicism”
Caroline Winterer
Stanford University

3:45 pm
General Comments and Discussion led by Jessica Riskin
Stanford University

Sponsored by the Patrick Suppes Center for the Interdisciplinary Study of Science and Technology, Stanford University