Want to get the facts about ROTC and hear the case against bringing it back to Stanford?

Visit the website that Prof. Ewart Thomas, Chair of the Faculty Senate’s Ad Hoc Committee, called “admirable”, “most informative”, and “visually appealing”!!

http://noro.tc

"We hold it to be a matter of the most profound principle and educational philosophy that the idea of a university and the ethos of the military are incompatible" — 72 faculty members of Columbia University/Barnard College

“[it is not] the place of first-rate universities to feed [society’s] desires [for ‘militaristic approaches to problems,’]” — Prof. Cecilia Ridgeway

“Schools have legitimate and moral reasons for keeping the military at bay, regardless of the repeal of ‘don’t ask, don’t tell.’ They can stand with those who for reasons of conscience reject military solutions to conflicts.” — Colman McCarthy

“[W]e need to be scaling back the militarism of our universities, not expanding it.” — Rev. Geoff Browning

“Stanford creates leaders. I don't want to live in a world where those leaders think that violence is an answer.” — Sam King

“Military training is fundamentally an exercise in overcoming the fear of killing another human.” — Lt. Col. David Grossman

“ROTC departments are, by their nature, incompatible with the University's primary commitment to the unrestricted creation and dissemination of knowledge” — Majority Report of the 1969 Ad Hoc Committee on ROTC