About Us
The World Peace Buddhists (WPB) at Stanford University campus club consists of Stanford students who are Buddhist practitioners. We are affiliated with the Buddhist organization Soka Gakkai International (SGI) and thus foster similar values. Like the SGI, the fundamental purpose of the WPB at Stanford University is the happiness of all people. Our goals are to contribute to global peace, culture exchange and humanistic education based on the philosophy and ideals of Nichiren Buddhism.

We have various activities throughout the school year. These activities include monthly introductory meetings open to the Stanford community. Please join us for these and other events if you are curious about our campus club and Buddhism.

“We must put down firm roots; we must be strong. Inner strength is a prerequisite for happiness, a prerequisite for upholding justice and one’s beliefs. One of the Buddha’s titles is “He Who Can Forbear.” To courageously endure, persevere and overcome all difficulties—the Buddha is the ultimate embodiment of the virtue of forbearance. The power of faith gives us the strength to weather and survive any storm. Perseverance is the essence of a Buddha.”

--Daisaku Ikeda

Contact Information
For more information please contact us via email and/or visit our website.

Email: contactwpb@lists.stanford.edu
Website: http://wpb.stanford.edu/index.html