COURSE DESCRIPTION

The Seminar combines the efforts of Chulalongkorn University in Bangkok, Thailand with those of the Stanford faculty organizers and seminar assistant to address issues related to education, development, and globalization in Thailand and Southeast Asia. In addition to class meetings, the seminar will consist of presentations and discussions with Her Royal Highness Princess Maha Chakri Sirindhorn, several high ranking government officials, Thai academics, international organizations, and local organizations. We will meet primarily on the campus of Chulalongkorn University and other locations in Bangkok as well as a short visit to Chiang Mai.

OBJECTIVES

At the end of the seminar, students would have

1. Gained an understanding of the Thai educational system at all levels.
2. Observed how the socio-economic and political issues affecting Thailand have shaped the lives of Thais at school, at work, and in their communities.
3. Contributed to a broader understanding of Americans on the part of Thai people.

COURSE NUMBER, UNITS & GRADING
OSPGEN 87 (Thailand); 2 units; Letter grade

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

• Seminar participation (meetings and discussion sessions)
• Readings [available on bb.stanford.edu]
• Assignments: Journal Entries, Interview, Final Essay
DISCUSSION SESSIONS (10% of total grade)

Students are expected to come to each lecture and site visit having read the required (and if possible, recommended readings) and with questions for the speakers. We will hold occasional discussion sessions to discuss your experiences and lecture material in an informal setting. Dates and times are subject to change.

JOURNAL ENTRIES (5 points each; 25% of grade total)

Journal entries will be written throughout the duration of the seminar to help you reflect on your experiences. Entries will be collected and graded only with a "check." Entries should be about 500 words and may be hand- or type-written. They are to be turned in by 7PM of the due date either directly to seminar leaders (if hand-written) or uploaded to Blackboard/Discussion Board.

Entry 1: Aug. 28

In your first days in Bangkok, what observations have you made about different aspects of life in Thailand (i.e., social interactions among Thais, the institutions, the surrounding environment)? How do you expect the seminar to help you gain a deeper understanding of what you see in Thailand?

Entry 2: Sept. 2

What are the successes of the Thai education system? What are its main challenges?

Entry 3: Sept. 5

What similarities and differences do you see between Thai K-12 education and the K-12 education you received? What do you think accounts for those differences?

Entry 4: Sept. 9

Reflect on our visit to St. Gabriel’s College, Suksa Song Khaow Welfare Boarding School, and Soon Ruam Num Jai School. How do educational issues differ among them? In the provinces versus those in Bangkok?

Entry 5: Sept. 12

Reflect on the relationship between education, development, and globalization in Thailand. Use this as a starting point for your Final Essay.
INTERVIEW ASSIGNMENT (25% of total grade)

Throughout this seminar, we explore and encounter a multitude of differences. Locally we are exploring differences with regard to region, wealth, social status, and gender. Personally, we cannot escape cultural differences that arise as we encounter and engage Thai culture, people, and institutions. As we continue our immersion experience, it is important to use our own observations to help us understand these differences, both external and internal. It is also necessary to incorporate the Thai people with whom we are interacting into our formal and informal analyses.

For this assignment, you will identify someone (student, teacher, administrator, staff member, etc.) whom you will interview in depth for at least one hour. You will likely have more to talk about than will fit in one hour, and if possible, feel free to continue past that time. Since we know that it may difficult to pin down a single interviewee for a full hour, please try to incorporate additional less formal interviews with 2 or 3 additional people if necessary. Have a list of questions prepared (Be creative!) that will allow you to explore your burgeoning experiences of difference in Thailand, particularly as they may pertain to educational experiences, understandings of the global community, and topics of personal interest related to globalization and development.

This assignment should be between 3 to 5 pages, double-spaced. The due date will be the final day of our seminar September 13, 2008, by 10PM. Please turn in via the “Assignments” button on Blackboard. Alternatively, you may hand it in to Professors Wotipka or Antonio.

FINAL ESSAY (40% of total grade)

Write an essay outlining one or two major challenges for contemporary Thai society, focusing on the role that education (elementary, secondary, & tertiary) plays in positively addressing and/or contributing to the persistence of those challenges. Draw upon lectures, journal assignments, and course materials for your essays.

This assignment should be 10 pages maximum, double spaced. The final essay will be due on October 15, 2008, by 1PM. This assignment must be turned in via the “Assignments” button on Blackboard.

DRESS CODES

Formal: Men must be in suit and necktie with polite leather shoes. Women must wear a semi-formal dress with short or long sleeves or a skirt suit. The dress or skirt must cover the knee. The colors are up to your taste and style but must be appropriate. No sandals, sneakers, or denim.

Formal mourning attire: Dress code is black. For men, black pants and white or black shirt with black necktie. For women, black dress or skirt and sleeved blouse. The dress or skirt must cover the knees and must look appropriate. No sandals, sneakers, or denim.

Semi-formal: “Dressier” modest business casual. No sandals, sneakers, or denim.

Modest business casual: Unless otherwise noted, the dress code for most weekdays is “modest” business casual. For women, we recommend dresses or skirts (at/below the knee) as they are cooler than pants. Tops must have sleeves and not be low cut. For men, we recommend pants and shirts with collars. For everyone, closed-toe sandals are allowed but nicer shoes (with socks for men) are recommended. No sneaker or denim.
