ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Peterhouse, Cambridge was an intellectual base and a home for me during the time that much of the work was done for this book. It was written when I was a member of the Centre d'Archeologie Classique, Sorbonne, and afterwards when I had moved to the Department of Archaeology, University of Wales Lampeter. Some short passages have been published in articles already. I attended an inspiring summer school at the British School at Athens in 1978; the staff and students have been supportive on the few occasions I have visited since then.

I thank the Museum of Classical Archaeology, Cambridge, for allowing me access to its photographic darkroom, and for permission to reproduce some photographs in its collection (acknowledgement is also given separately with each item). Funding is gratefully acknowledged from Routledge, the British Academy, Peterhouse, the Pantyfedwen Fund (Saint David's College, University of Wales Lampeter), and the Maison des Sciences de l'Homme, Paris.
